History

Horse warriors from Hakland attacked the Northern Kingdoms sometime before the 13th century.[4]

According to the Nilfgaardian Encyclopaedia Maxima Mundi, the event known as Haak Invasion took place in 1350.[5]

Society and Culture

Haak people are said to be the finest horsemen in the world, learning the art as babies before they even learn to walk.[3] They are also remarkable archers and combining this with excellence in horsemanship, they become formidable warriors.[6]

Economy

Exports include smooth silk, sold for large sums in Redania,[7] and aragonite, a rare carbonate mineral only found in Hakland.[8]

Notable people

- Calib Bronn
- Stefan the Crane (supposedly)
